

TheoretiCS Helper for Editors-in-Chief

Nathanaël Fijalkow, Antoine Amarilli

The evaluation of a paper follows a two phase process illustrated in the two flowcharts found in the next two pages. The flowcharts display the sequence of steps from the paper's point of view. Solid arrows have a conjunctive semantics: they indicate all necessary next steps. On the other hand, dashed arrows are disjunctive: depending on the agent's action, only one arrow is followed. Texts in red explicit the emails from the Episcience system triggered by the corresponding action.

TheoretiCS is special in the following aspects:

- The first reviewing phase lasts at most 3 months, ensuring to provide quick feedback to the authors with a decision: the paper is either conditionally accepted if the second reviewing phase finds the results to be correct and the presentation of high quality, or rejected.
- Both the outcomes of Phase 1 and Phase 2 are collectively decided within the Editorial Board (among editors who declared not having a conflict of interest).

TheoretiCS is an overlay ArXiv journal, meaning that submissions are managed through ArXiv. To submit a paper, the authors first submit to ArXiv, and then to TheoretiCS simply by indicating the ArXiv identifier. Revisions are also handled through ArXiv: whenever a revised version is requested from the authors, they submit a new version of their paper on ArXiv and report on the revision to TheoretiCS.
